

Whilst night time brought an end to the third day of fighting much diplomacy and trading was taking place, with alliances made and information traded. Dark clouds on the horizon meant that everyone knew that a storm was approaching and the fighting would soon halt early the next day.

The Baron already knew about the Royal family hiding in Kashgar, fortunately for the Royals the Bolsheviks holding the town didn't know this piece of information otherwise they might have made a better job of their execution. Max Factor received information about the Russian Gold Reserves hiding in some caves in the mountains as did the expedition force of Adolf Jung and they were both unlikely to share the spoils. Ming the Merciless, Yuri Deadovitch and the Japanese under Stevo-San all found out about Phatti and decided to combine their resources to rescue her from the clutches of the evil Khan. What would the Army of God do with all these forces heading the same way. Only the break of dawn would supply the answer.

